College Dems Participate in 1,000 Points of Light

Illinois State University College Dems will be joining College Democrats from all over America to protest the nomination of President George W. Bush by the Republican National Committee.

Students at the Illinois State University Campus will go to the quad at 8pm on Thursday night with flash lights, lighters, and anything else that can help produce light. The light will represent the hope that America will do better under a new President.

"On Thursday night, Americans will gather in every corner of the country to shine a light on the failed policies of this President," said DNC Chairman Terry McAuliffe. "Americans know that this country can do better with John Kerry and John Edwards."

College Dems Executive Board and members will be available for comment before and after the event.
